DAYNA

"After Hurricane Irma left my family was left with nothing. I was working through medical challenges, fell into depression, and was falling behind in classes while homeschooling. I even considered dropping out of school. I was just surviving before coming to Pace. I didn't know what I would do after high school or if I would even finish. At Pace, they worked with me on developing coping skills, helped me explore different career options and got me back on track academically so I could graduate on time. Pace helped me develop a better relationship with my family and make new friends. I am no longer surviving...I am thriving!"

Dayna is currently attending Florida State College at Jacksonville, studying to be a psychologist.
